And then the selling stopped. By the end of the week, the Dow had advanced 373.70 points, or 1.1%, to a record 35,061.55, closing above 35,000 for the first time. The S&P 500 index gained 2%, to 4411.79, while the Nasdaq Composite climbed 2.8%, to 14,836.99, also record highs. It's another reminder that one-day moves don't always have the meaning we ascribe to them.
