Stocks ended mostly higher Friday with Wall Street coming out of the Thanksgiving holiday to post its fourth-straight week of gains.

Investors have remained optimistic that the Federal Reserve will not raise interest rates any further and could start cutting borrowing costs in the first quarter of 2024.

Some headwinds to stocks Friday came from a mild rise in U.S. Treasury yields. The benchmark 10-year yield rose to 4.47% from 4.41% on Wednesday.
