It was a rollercoaster of a week on Wall Street, but stocks closed Friday's session higher and managed to climb for the week despite the bond yields rising to multi-year highs.

The S&P 500 gained 0.5% on Friday. The Nasdaq rose 0.5%. Both indexes were green for the week, increasing 1.2% and 2.1%, respectively. The Dow Jones Industrial Average added 0.9%, or 478 points. The Dow increased 0.3% for the week. All three indexes saw their largest weekly gains since August.
