

BONDS

AI Is Hurting and Helping the Stock Market Contributing to Soaring Bond Yields

By Jack Denton Follow

Oct 02, 2026 8:54 am EDT

...

The benchmark 10-year U.S. Treasury yield rose at the fastest pace this century in the third quarter, with much of the advance coming in late August and through September. The note's yield popped from around the 4.6% mark to above 5.3%, the highest level in 24 years, sitting at 5.23% on Friday.

...

Other Treasury notes have also seen their yields surge, but the rise has been concentrated in longer-dated notes, like the 30-year, also near 24-year highs, while shorter-dated Treasuries like the 2-year and 5-year have seen more muted advances. Corporate bond yields have also followed benchmark Treasury yields higher.